Diatomaceous Earth (controls parasites)

What is Diatomaceous Earth?

Diatomaceous earth is an all natural product made from tiny fossilized water plants. The fossilized skeletal remains of these diatoms accumulate in layers on lake and sea floors forming deposits. These deposits are dust-like and mined from freshwater sources for use with animals internally and externally. This DE does contain 36 trace minerals.

Our DE is especially made in granulated form because powdered forms can sometimes cause choking in animals. Powdered DE is fine for animals to roll in to keep their hair or fiber clean and bugs and flies away.

CAUTION: Different Types of DE

Not all diatomaceous earth is food grade and safe for ingestion. Fresh water DE is mined from ancient lakebeds and ideal for agricultural uses and can be taken internally with less than 1% FCS. Saltwater DE (also used in pools) is not food grade and should not be ingested.

How Does Diatomaceous Earth work as a insect and parasite inhibitor?

Documented uses of DE go back over 4,000 years. The sharp edges of the DE come in contact with insects or parasites piercing their protective shell, causing them to dehydrate and die.
